Constitution

Article I. Name

The name of the society shall be the Acoustical Society of America.

Article II. Purpose

The purpose of the society shall be to increase and diffuse the knowledge of acoustics and promote its practical applications.

Article III. Membership

The society shall be composed of the subscribers to this constitution at the date of organization and such other persons or corporations as shall be hereafter admitted to membership in accordance with the provisions of the By-Laws.

The membership shall be classified as follows: honorary members, sustaining members, and members, as provided in the By-Laws. Sustaining members may be either persons or corporations; all other members must be persons. The voting power shall be restricted to and vested exclusively in the members constituting the fellows of the society.

Article IV. Executive Council

The affairs of the society shall be in charge of an executive council which shall consist of the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer and six fellows to be elected as provided in the By-Laws.

Article V. Officers

The officers of the society shall consist of a president, a vice president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall be chosen in the manner provided in the By-Laws.

Article VI. Amendments

This constitution may be altered or amended at any meeting of the society when a proposed amendment, as submitted by the executive council, is favored by two-thirds of all of the fellows present thereat voting upon such amendment. A copy of every proposed amendment shall be mailed to each fellow of the society at least thirty days before a vote is to be taken thereon. All voting shall be by ballot.

This constitution may be subscribed to in any number of counterparts, all of which shall constitute one and the same instrument, irrespective of the time or times when the same, or any of the counterparts, was or may be subscribed to.

Amendment I. Editor

In addition to the four officers mentioned in Article V, the Editor of the Journal shall also be an officer of the society and a member of the executive council. He shall be chosen in the manner provided in the By-Laws.

By-Laws

Article I. Name and Purpose of the Society

The name and purpose of this society shall be those stated in the constitution.

Article II. Membership

Section 1—Eligibility

There shall be four classes of membership, viz., honorary, fellows, sustaining members, members.

Any person or corporation interested in acoustics shall be eligible for membership in this society. Every person or corporation desiring to become a member of this society shall in person or by authorized representative sign an application for such membership.

Any person of outstanding eminence in theoretical or applied acoustics may be elected to honorary membership.

Any person who shall have rendered conspicuous service and made notable contributions in acoustics shall be eligible to fellowship in this society.

Any person or corporation contributing Fifty Dollars ($50) or more annually may be elected a sustaining member.

Section 2—Election

Applications for membership must be signed by two or more fellows or members and forwarded to the secretary. Applicants shall be admitted to membership when their applications have been approved by three or more members of the executive council.

All classes of membership other than honorary shall be elected by a majority vote at a regular or special meeting of the executive council. Honorary members shall be elected only by a unanimous vote of the executive council.

Section 3—Privileges

The right to vote at elections, and hold office shall be restricted to and exclusively vested in the membership constituting fellows. All other classes of membership, other than honorary, shall have the same privileges as fellows, except as herein otherwise provided.

Honorary members shall have such privileges as may be granted by the executive council.

Section 4—Termination of Membership

Membership in the society may be terminated at any time by a majority vote of the executive council. Failure to pay dues for one year would be deemed sufficient cause for termination of membership.

Article III. Dues

The annual dues of the society shall be Seven Dollars and Fifty Cents ($7.50) for fellows and Five Dollars ($5.00) for members.

Disbursements shall be made by the treasurer when such disbursements are approved by a two-thirds vote of the executive council.

Article IV. Officers

The officers of the society shall consist of a president, a vice president, a secretary and a treasurer.

Section 1—Eligibility

Any fellow is eligible for election to any office in the society.

All officers except members of the council shall be elected for a period of one year.

Two members of the council shall be elected each year and shall hold office for a period of three years.

All officers shall take office two weeks after election.

After serving two consecutive terms the president shall be ineligible for re-election. After serving one term members of the executive council shall be ineligible for immediate re-election.

Section 2—Election

Election shall be by ballot. Nominations shall be made by a nominating committee appointed by the president and approved by the council. This committee shall consist of five fellows of the society, at least one of whom shall, when present at the meeting, be a past president of the society. The name of any candidate suggested by more than ten fellows shall appear on the official ballot along with those nominated by the nominating committee.

Article V. Meetings

The meetings of the society and the executive council shall be held at such times and place as may be designated from time to time by the executive council.

Article VI. Order of Business

The order of business shall be determined by the executive council.

Article VII. Executive Council

The affairs of the society shall be managed by an executive council which shall consist of the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer and six members to be elected as provided in these by-laws. Each member of the council shall be a fellow in good standing at the time of election.

Any vacancy occurring in the executive council may be filled for the unexpired term by a majority vote of the remaining members of the executive council.

Article VIII. President

The president shall, if present, preside over all meetings of the society and the executive council. In case of the absence of the president, the vice president shall have all the powers and perform all the duties of the president.

Article IX. Secretary

The secretary shall attend all meetings of the society and the executive council and shall keep a true and faithful record thereof.

Article X. Treasurer

The treasurer shall have charge of and receive all the funds and securities of the society. He shall deposit the funds to the credit of the society in such bank or trust company as the executive council shall direct and he shall disburse the same only upon the approval of the executive council.

Article XI. Amendment

Upon recommendation of the executive council, these by-laws may be altered or amended at any meeting of the society by a majority vote of the members present. Before the executive council will make any recommendations, the substance of the proposed alterations or amendments must have been submitted to each of its members.

Amendment I. Editor

In addition to the four officers mentioned in Article IV, the Editor of the Journal shall also be an officer of the Society and a member of the Executive Council.

Section 1

Any Fellow is eligible for election to the office of Editor. The Editor shall be elected for a period of three years and shall be eligible for re-election.

Section 2

Election shall be by ballot in the manner prescribed in Article IV, Section 2 of the By-Laws.

Section 3

The Editor shall be assisted by an Editorial Board which shall consist of five persons appointed by the Editor and approved by the Executive Council.

Amendment II. Retiring President

Upon completion of his term of office the retiring president shall automatically become a member of the Executive Council for a period of one year.

History

ON December 27, 1928, a group of some forty interested people met to discuss the possibility of forming an Acoustical Society. The proposal was regarded with enthusiasm, so that plans were perfected that led to the formal organization of the ACOUSTICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA on May 10–11, 1929, at the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City, with a charter membership of about 450.*

During the six years since 1929 the Acoustical Society has prospered. Two meetings of the society have been held each year, with an attendance of an interested group of members, and a stimulation of effort in the solution of acoustic problems. Important advances have been made in various subjects, notably in the theory and measurement of the intensity, absorption, and transmission of sound; the loudness and tone-structure of noise; reverberation in rooms; the processes of speech and hearing; the performance of music, both instrumental and vocal. Many new instruments have been developed to measure these phenomena, with an increasing use of the modern vacuum tube for generating and amplifying sound. National leadership has been assumed by the society in the study and control of noise; and in the promotion of ideals wherever acoustic matters are involved. In 1931 the society joined with other scientific societies in the formation of the American Institute of Physics, a national organization formed to unite all societies interested in physics.

The membership, which numbers about 700 at the present writing, is a composite group. It includes investigators in universities and research laboratories who study the theory of sound and conduct experiments on acoustic phenomena; also, there are a considerable number who are interested in the practical applications of acoustics for the benefit of the public, a procedure that requires the intelligent development of instruments and acoustic products to a high degree of perfection.

An important element in the progress of the society is the Journal of the Acoustical Society, which has appeared quarterly with reports of the society meetings and papers on various acoustical subjects. Such a journal was needed, and it is now recognized at home and abroad as the leading journal in its field.

The society has been fortunate in attracting the interest of a group of able men who have served diligently in various capacities. The unselfish interest of these individuals in the formation and development of the organization has been largely responsible for its growth and present standing. Various industrial organizations have also given gratifying financial and moral support to the society.

The outlook for the future is bright. Acoustic phenomena have a fascination for most people. Not only are abstract problems to be solved, but the increasing importance of sound and noise in the everyday life of the average citizen is a challenge to engineers in the practical application of acoustic principles. It is the function of the Acoustical Society to stimulate and encourage these developments.

THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY MEETING

All that is written in the preceding History is still true, but in greater degree. The Tenth Anniversary Meeting, held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City on May 15–16, 1939, was a notable occasion. There was a record attendance, a splendid program with a number of special demonstration papers, and a series of interesting events—a luncheon in honor of the first officers, an evening dinner, besides various luncheon and dinner parties, with a final well-planned visit to the World's Fair on May 17. There was a general feeling of satisfaction that the Society had made a creditable progress during its first ten years, and that the future looked even better in prospect.

The American Institute of Physics is a membership corporation of which five societies are the founding members. These five societies are the principal national societies devoted to pure and applied physics in America. Their names, and those of their representatives who form the Governing Board of the Institute, are given above. The principal work of the Institute is the publication of journals sponsored by the societies or by itself. The names and the editors of the journals are also listed above.

The broad purpose of the Institute is to represent, in all matters of wide or common interest, the five thousand or more members and subscribers associated with the Founder Societies and the journals. It aims to advance the science and profession of physics, and to promote cooperation between pure research, the applied sciences and the industries. To achieve these aims, it is greatly in need of an endowment and is empowered by law to administer grants and funds of any kind.
